Description

1. Launch gvSIG
2. Create a view
3. Open the view and maximize the window
4. Add a layer
5. Check that both horizontal and vertical scrool bars appeared

Additional information:

- Restoring the view window and maximizing it again fixes the problem.
- If the layer is loaded before maximizing the window, the problem doesn't appear.

This is not a critical issue but is quite annoying. It could be related with #1427

- Target version changed from 2.2.0-2311-rc2 to 2.1.0-2259-rc3

This is a tedious issue because it happens very often and it affects the main gvSIG document, i.e. the view. So IMHO it should have a normal priority at least. I was wondering why the target version changed to 2.2.0-rc1. 2.2.0-rc1??? Is it a typo or what?

#6 - 05/18/2014 09:50 PM - Álvaro Anguix

- Target version changed from 2.1.0-2259-rc3 to 2.2.0-2311-rc2

Please Antonio, don't change the target version of bugs. This bug is assigned post 2.1 because it has an impact and we have decided not to fix it now.

Hi all, is this ticket planned for 2.2 or above? I think that it's a strategic one in term of usability.

#9 - 03/20/2015 10:11 AM - Álvaro Anguix

Hi, Antonio. No, because it's not easy/quick solution and we must leave that for later.

Creo que en un momento de inspiración lo he arreglado, pero igual hay que hacer pruebas para ver que no pasa nada raro.

Habría que repasar los tickets relacionados para ver que ha pasado con ellos.
